Colorado Attorney General Outspoken in Fight on Octopus.

Denver, Nev. 27.—The doctrine enunciated by former Judge Alton B. Parker and controverted by Presi-dent Roosevelt in 1904, that the comdent Roosevelt in 1994, that the common law provides all the authority necessary to curb any trust, is being applied in Colorado in a manner similar to the use which District. Attorney John C. Bell, of Philadelphia, made of it a year ago to break up the local ice combine. Colorado has no anti-trust law, yet Attorney-General Dickson is proceeding against the State combination of grocers and the local coal trust with as much vigor as any Federal "trust buster" has shown.

The Attorney-General brought suit against the two combines after there had been prolonged public clamor against the killing of competition and the continual boosting of prices of food and fuel. He has sought injunctions against both the organizations to prevent their further operation.

Agreement Made.

Agreement Made. "There is an agreement between the coal operators, the retailers and the railroads," said Mr. Dickson, "that effectually prevent an independent coal dealer carrying on business. The grocers' trust likewise has fixed the price of commodities and sworn its members to secreey Any cannot do that. But if he proves his case and secures the desired injunctions, he proposes to enforce them by fine and imprisonment for contempt if they are violated. He hopes to get both cases through the courts before the end of January.

In a brief to the Supreme Court in his fight to sustain the law creating the State Raliroad Commission, Attorney-General Dickson discusses theory of Government regulation and issues a remarkable warning to the railroads. In part he says:

"The demand for regulation of those engaged in a public service and owing a public duty is but just and reasonable, it is more than popular clamor. The 'will of the people' is more than an idle phrase. The rights of the Legislature are not imaginary. The constitution is not an instrument intended as a means, of evade the eternal principles of right.

The good people of this State have endured much. They may, if compelled to do so, worry along for a time without a railroad commission, or a railroad law; but, as surely as they do, there will come a time when un-reasoning reform will sweep into power, and then the railroads here engaged will be fighting-not reasonable legislation, but confiscation under the guise of law, May that day never come; but if it does come, the reason and the blame will lie with those directing the misguided forces now centered upon the defeat of the reason statute.

of the present statute.
"We urge that the court erect no artificial barrier to shut off wholesome and reasonable regulation. To unreasonable legislative enact ment. We warn corporations per-forming a public, not to eternally oppose just and same regulation and restraint; to do so is a certain way to bring about unjust, unreasonable and unwarranted restraint,"
